Lochee began as a tiny community of weavers who settled along the banks of a burn in the late eighteenth century. Such was the rapid growth of industry in the area that a few decades later Lochee firm Cox Brothers' Camperdown Works had become the largest jute factory in the world employing some 5000 people. This booming industry saw the local population rise bolstered by Irish immigrants many of whose descendants still live in the locality today. Despite becoming about the author Brian King was born and grew up in Dundee and has always had an interest in the changing face of the city. He now lives in Edinburgh where he received an MA Hons in History at university. He currently works at the university as a professional.
