Crime and Deviance in Scotland Since 1400:

This collection arose from the Women's History Network conference Twisted Sisters held at Glasgow Caledonian University in October 2000. Spanning the mediaeval period to modernity the papers look at women's involvement in crime and deviance in both private and public spheres of Scottish society including infanticide, social deviance, witchcraft and political influence. They offer a new perspective on accepted norms of female behaviour challenging the received view of About the Author Yvonne Galloway Brown is employed at Glasgow Caledonian University where she teaches modern history. Rona Ferguson is Research Assistant in the Centre for Contemporary History Glasgow Caledonian University
